

COLTON STEELE'S SLANGUAGE:

A=E

Airbraining (verb) – Thinking way too hard about something nonsensical or dumb. She's airbraining over which potato chip to eat first.

Banshee Mode (noun) – When someone completely loses their mind, usually in an unnecessary way. She went full banshee mode because her Wi-Fi lagged for two seconds.

Bassquake (noun) – A beat so hard it rattles your bones. This drop is a full-on bassquake.

Beat Thrash (noun, verb) — Going all out dancing, like in a mosh pit, no holds barred. (noun) This song? Straight-up beat thrash material. (verb) We were totally beat thrashing to that neon anthem.

Boomstride (verb) – To walk with heavy, unbothered confidence, making your presence known with every step. That guy boomstrided into math class with a burrito and no remorse.

Couch Mode (noun)– Someone who never does anything fun or engaging. Bro is in full couch mode, won't even leave the house.

Driftstep (noun)– A dance style that's fluid and dreamlike. His driftstep was unreal, like he was made of water.

Driv (noun) – Bestie, family – a mix up of Dude and 'priv' (short for privilege) – a trusted, close friend you are privileged to have. Shout out to my drivs for always holding it down.

Egging (verb) – When someone is trying too hard to be deep, but it just sounds dumb. He's egging again— just called his grilled cheese a 'crispy existential paradox.'

F=J

Flibber (noun) – A person who constantly changes plans and never follows through. She said she'd be here at 7. Classic flibber energy.

Grapefruit (verb) – To aggressively ignore someone by being overly invested in something meaningless. She grapefruit-ed me by watching a squirrel dig a hole instead of answering my question.

Hush Rocket (noun) – An instant regret moment when you wish you could disappear. I tripped over my own foot in front of my crush. Hush rocket activated.

Jellybones (noun) – A person with zero backbone who agrees with everyone. He switched sides in the debate mid-sentence. Total jellybones move.

K=O

Kneecapping (verb) – Accidentally sabotaging yourself in a ridiculous way. I kneecapped myself by eating six tacos before my big speech.

Lampsharking (verb) – To confidently pretend you know something when you absolutely don't. He lampsharked his way through the quantum physics discussion with 'Yeah, for sure, atoms do be like that.'

Lyrical Lighter (noun) – A song that sparks something deep in your soul. That chorus? Straight-up lyrical lighter.

Lunatune(d) (adjective, verb, noun) – From lunatic and 'tuned out' and a play on Looney Tunes – disconnected from reality, delusional. (adj) Dude is full-on lunatuned if he thinks he can win. (verb) She fully lunatuned after hearing the news. (noun) He's a total lunatune.

Moochquake (noun) – That sudden realization someone is only nice to you because they need something. I felt the moochquake hit when he asked for my Netflix password.

Neon Anthem (noun) – A song that just feels like a party. Put on that neon anthem—I need to dance.

Noodle Time (noun) – That weird moment where no one knows what's happening but we all just go with it. We all stood there watching the Roomba get stuck in a corner. Pure noodle time.

Office Aura (noun) – Boring, too mature – like working in an office. He's got a real office aura. He'd fit in better with my Auntie Myrtle.

Offline Aura (noun) – No presence, no charisma, just... there. She's got a serious offline aura. No spice, no drama, just oatmeal vibes.

Ovenface (noun) – The expression someone makes when they open the oven and get hit with hot air. She made the classic ovenface when she walked outside in Texas summer.

P = T

Platinum Poison (noun) – Song that's so addictive, it's guaranteed to go platinum. This hook is straight platinum poison—I can't stop singing it.

Popcorn Thinking (noun) – When someone changes topics so fast you can't keep up. I asked about his weekend, and suddenly we were debating the ethics of space cows. Classic popcorn thinking.

Latch (verb, noun) – To attract, secure, or effortlessly draw people in, whether through confidence, style, or charm. (verb) Bro just latched three numbers in one night. (noun) His latch game is unreal—dude pulls without even trying.

Quack Attack (verb) – From quacking like a duck + attack. To completely overreact to something minor or trivial. She straight-up quack attacked over her nail polish chipping.

Ramen Hands (noun) – That feeling when your hands are so dry they feel like uncooked noodles. Winter hit, and now I've got full-on ramen hands.

Rev (noun) – Revolutionary – a person who always makes things happen, a regular that arrives first on the scene. That rev in the purple hoodie rolled up in a Lambo. Respect.

Snailboxing (verb) – To send someone a message that takes so long to arrive, you might as well have mailed it via an actual snail. Dude, why did you snailbox me back? I texted you last week!

Snooze Titan (noun) – Someone who sleeps through everything important, as if they rule the land of unconsciousness. We had an earthquake and that snooze titan didn't even flinch.

Solar Flare (noun) – So attractive and magnetic, they light up the room. Did you see them walk in? Total solar flare pull.

Static (noun) – A person who just exists in the background, adding nothing. An NPC. He's a static—same response every time you talk to him.

Stir and Get Blurred (verb) – To mess around too much and end up getting wrecked—physically, verbally, or socially. Mess with the wrong rev, and you'll stir and get blurred.

Thirst Beacon (noun) – A person who unintentionally draws in admirers like moths to a flame. Dude's a total thirst beacon—he could wear a trash bag and still get compliments.

Toaster Braining (verb) – When your brain short-circuits from something dumb. I just saw a cat with eyebrows. My brain is toaster braining.

Trend Fossil (noun) – Someone who picks up slang and trends after they're already extinct. My aunt just started dabbing. Absolute trend fossil.

Torque Up (verb) – To hype yourself up or others before something big. Let's torque up before we hit the stage to compete.

Trip Void (noun) – The empty feeling after a highly-anticipated event or trip ends and real life hits again. Just got back from the festival, and I'm deep in a tripvoid.

U = Z

Umbrella Friend (noun) – The person who always has a backup plan when everything goes wrong. Thankfully, Sarah's an umbrella friend—she already booked us a different Uber.

Underground Eruption (noun) – A hidden gem that's about to blow up. This song's an underground eruption—give it a month.

Unriddle (noun) – Call someone out, casually expose someone's nonsense. She tried to say she got there first, but I unriddled her real quick.

Vortex Energy (noun) – When someone is so chaotic they pull others into their nonsense. Jake forgot his keys, lost his wallet, and now we're all late. Classic vortex energy.

Whistleblopping (verb) – Talking super loudly in a quiet place without realizing it. Grandpa was whistleblopping about his knee surgery in the library.

Xerox Regret (noun) – The deep shame of sending a text to the wrong person. Sent my boss a meme meant for my friend... full xerox regret mode activated.

Yesterfail (noun) – Mash up of yesterday and fail – something outdated in an embarrassing way. He wore a TikTok hoodie to the club. Major yesterfail..

Yeti Wrapped (verb) – Bundled up for cold weather, only to overheat once inside. Winter's wild. One second I'm freezing, next I'm yeti wrapped and dying in a heated room.

Zoodle Mode (noun) – That trance-like state you enter when scrolling endlessly online. I just lost three hours to zoodle mode watching raccoon videos.